

LIGHT BITE: Al fresco dining in Mong Kok. Photo: May Tse

ONE NIGHT IN MONG KOK

Famous for its crime film locations, great street food and population density, the district also holds its own as a nightlife destination

Text: JAMES GRIFFITHS and CHARLEY LANYON

Line your stomach

Regardless of the day of the week, Mong Kok nights go late, so start slowly. Thankfully, the recently opened The Ale Project (TAP) is the perfect venue from which to launch a night of debauchery. Located in the quieter Soy Street area, TAP offers dozens of local and international craft beers paired with a bread-focused artisanal menu, ideal stomach lining. Squeeze yourself into the smaller-than-expected venue and order a pint of the Hong Kong Black seasonal winter beer (HK$65) from local brewery Young Master. Follow that with Lap Cheong Schmear (HK$58), onsite-made duck liver pâté and pork lap cheong on TAP's signature "beer bread".

The Ale Project, 15 Hak Po Street, tel: 2468 2010, Tue-Sun, noon-2am, thealeproject.com

